

Winners of the PRS New Music Award**

"The Dials have recorded two of my favourite songs this year" Mark Lamarr, BBC Radio 2

"Really, really good" Dave Henderson, Mojo

"A great band" Bob Harris, BBC Radio

"Holy Toledo! Say hello to my new favourite band: pure energy, hard-howling, Brit-infused honky-tonk, Spaghetti-Western-worthy music that hot diggity damn, you can really sink your chops into. The Dials proved to be the show of the [NXNE] night." Soundproof Magazine, Canada

Classic country-rock via pop's psychedelic past

With Hammond grooves, plaintive pedal steel and classic song writing, The Dials have been favourably likened to The Byrds, Love, Ronnie Lane and early Pink Floyd. Despite comparisons that read like a vintage copy of Mojo magazine, the band are firmly facing the future and have a sound that is completely their own.

Their self titled debut album, released in March 2007, has received extensive UK and international airplay and an unwaveringly euphoric critical response. The Dials are winners of The PRS new music award which recognises "the best in creative and innovative music happening in the UK today".

The band are currently recording their second album.
